Eye Movement Desensitization & Reprocessing Therapy

World Health Organization (WHO, 2013) Guidelines for the management of conditions specifically related to stress indicated that trauma-focused CBT and EMDR are the only psychotherapies recommended for children, adolescents and adults with PTSD.

“Eye movement desensitization and reprocessing (EMDR): This therapy is based on the idea that negative thoughts, feelings and behaviors are the result of unprocessed memories. The treatment involves standardized procedures that include focusing simultaneously on

- spontaneous associations of traumatic images, thoughts, emotions and bodily sensations and
- bilateral stimulation that is most commonly in the form of repeated eye movements.

Like CBT with a trauma focus, EMDR aims to reduce subjective distress and strengthen adaptive beliefs related to the traumatic event. Unlike CBT with a trauma focus, EMDR does not involve (a) detailed descriptions of the event, (b) direct challenging of beliefs, (c) extended exposure, or (d) homework.”

Shapiro’s (2001) Adaptive Information Processing model posits that EMDR therapy facilitates the accessing and processing of traumatic memories and other adverse life experience to bring these to an adaptive resolution. After successful treatment with EMDR therapy, affective distress is relieved, negative beliefs are reformulated, and physiological arousal is reduced. During EMDR therapy the client attends to emotionally disturbing material in brief sequential doses while simultaneously focusing on an external stimulus.

Trauma Recovery, EMDR Humanitarian Assistance Programs – An Overview:

- Trauma Recovery/HAP was started nearly 20 years ago by Dr Shapiro after the Oklahoma City bombing.
- Since that time, we have coordinated projects throughout the U.S. and internationally in more than 30 countries.
- In 2014 the UN Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations recommended that the UN Economic and Social Council grant EMDR Humanitarian Assistance Programs Special Consultative Status.
- Trauma Recovery/HAP was the recipient of the 2011 International Society for Traumatic Stress Studies (ISTSS) Sarah Haley Memorial Award for Clinical Excellence.
- Francine Shapiro personally trains all of our EMDR trainers, after which they go through our rigorous and well-documented Faculty Academy training process.
- We provide training to non-profit and government organizations.
- The goals of Trauma Recovery/HAP include educating the public about the effects of trauma and providing support for professionals working with underserved populations.
- Last year, Trauma Recovery/HAP trained over 2000 clinicians from non-profit and government organizations from 29 states across the nation. These agencies provide services to children, families, veterans, active military, individuals struggling with substance abuse and other vulnerable populations.
- The passion of those who use EMDR therapy is evident through the commitment of our hundreds of volunteers who continue to donate their own time to provide EMDR therapy training.
- Trauma Recovery/HAP collaborates with inner-city non-profit agencies to provide trauma education workshops and clinical trainings. It also coordinates a Trauma Recovery Network of regional associations where passionate volunteer clinicians become proficient at emergency response methods, and collaborate with local response organizations.
- Groups of EMDR trained clinicians gather at EMDR International Association (EMDRIA) Regional Network meetings as a community of support and training across the nation.
